

Gresham Village School and Nursery

Writing Strategy

Introduction

This Writing Strategy has been written in order to explain how we teach writing at Gresham Village School and Nursery. Underpinning the pedagogy behind it, are the following key principles:

- Children learn to write well, if they read well and are exposed to high quality texts.
- In order to write fluently, children need to master the skills of handwriting, spelling and punctuation. These skills need to be taught in a sequential way from Early Years.
- Children need to write frequently and in a range of text types in order to build up the stamina and grammatical control required to write purposefully, quickly or at length.
- Writing should not just take place during the writing lesson. Children need to apply their writing skills across the curriculum.
- Children need to learn to evaluate the success and accuracy of their writing, if they are to improve.

Teaching sequences for writing in Key Stages 1 and 2

Our teaching sequences for writing is explained fully appendix 2 of this strategy: Guidance for planning a writing unit. Basically, whether planning a one-week unit in year 1 or a three week unit in Upper Key Stage 2, the sequence of learning remains the same:

1. Identify and understand the key features of the text type by reading high quality texts. In Key Stage 1, this might be a whole single text. By Upper Key Stage 2, this could be several examples from parts of different texts.
2. Understanding and applying a grammar or punctuation focus.
3. Extended writing time for the children to write independently.
4. Evaluation and improvement.

Assessment of children's writing

Every child from year 1 to 6 has a writing assessment sheet in their writing book, which teachers complete during the course of every term. The sheet enables teachers to identify gaps in children's skills and knowledge and for teachers to give a termly summative assessment for each child. Every term, each teacher's judgements are moderated at Trust Writing Moderation meetings and Pupil Progress Reviews.

Teachers mark and give feedback according to the specification for marking and feedback in the Teaching and Learning Guidance. The expectation is that every extended piece of writing is marked thoroughly and feedback including next steps is given.

Overview of progression in the teaching of writing

	Handwriting	Spelling	Grammar and punctuation	Composition
N	In continuous provision, children are taught to use a comfortable grip in order to paint, draw and form early letters and mark making. They are also taught to write their name and use initial sounds, when appropriate. Adults model the RWI letter formation phrase eg 'round the apple and down the leaf'.	Children help to compose their own writing through helicopter writing, as a regular part of continuous provision.
R	Forming letters, words and sentences Following the RWI sequence in a daily writing lesson, teach children to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Sit correctly to write and hold a pencil correctly.</li> <li>Correctly form lower case and capital letters without joins</li> <li>Begin to develop consistent letter size and spaces.</li> </ul>	Spell words by identifying sounds in them and representing the sounds with a letter or letters As part of their daily writing lesson, through RWI, children learn to spell phonetically by identifying the sound, then writing the sounds with letters. They begin to spot some common exception words.	Write simple phrases and sentences that can be read by others Through RWI and the daily writing lesson, children learn to write sentences with words with known sound-letter correspondences using a capital letter and full stop. The children are taught to reread what they have written to check it makes sense. See Reception Early Learning Goals for end of year expected outcomes.

Reception and Year 1

The learning environment needs to support children with spelling banks on the wall, such as a 'tricky word tree' in the classroom to put new vocabulary and 'tricky' spellings to use as a reference point.

In reception and Year 1, children are learning to spell most words phonetically. However, from reception, children are also beginning to learn common exception words and from Year 1, in order to create the habit of responding to marking and editing their writing, teachers can begin to write the correct spelling of some words for the child to correct, as appropriate to age and ability.

From Year 2

If children are having difficulties with a spelling in their writing, they are taught to have up to three attempts either in the margin of their book, the back page of their exercise book or in a spelling journal, before they choose which spelling to adopt in their writing. Children are discouraged from asking for a spelling from an adult in order to develop their independence.

Again, teachers can support children with spelling banks on the wall, for example, containing technical words that the children may need for the piece of writing and through a word wall in the classroom to put new vocabulary and 'tricky' spellings for all to use as a reference point.

Teachers do not need to mark every incorrect spelling in a piece of writing. However, it is important to draw children's attention to errors in their spelling as appropriate to their ability. Children should be encouraged to proofread and correct on a daily basis as part of the writing process. Teachers and TAs must use the school marking and feedback guide found in the Teaching and Learning Guidance, when marking spellings in children's writing.

Some children will require individual spelling lists and spell checkers to help them with independent spelling.

Spelling tests and learning spellings at home

Parents are aware of the spellings that are being covered at school through the terms-on-a-page; for some children, such as children with a specific difficulty with spelling, this might be part of a support plan. However, there is little to gain for most children by taking spellings home to learn and being tested the following week in school, as they usually stay in the short-term memory only and is often the source of anxiety. Therefore, we do not send spellings home to be tested at school. However, this is not to say that there is not a place for little assessments in class and it is important that we carry out our termly summative check for children from year 2.

Appendix 2: Guidance for planning a writing unit

Key Stage 2

Phase 1 Understanding the text type

Purpose:

- Understand the purpose of the text type
- Identify and understand the key features of the text type

Pedagogy:

This phase will typically last a week.

It will involve:

- Learning objectives focus on identifying and understanding text features and how authors use language within this text type to engage their readers.
- Shared reading from example texts to exemplify and gain an understanding of the text type and its features.
- Building or sharing a list of text features that can be referred to throughout the writing unit
- Children identifying and explaining the text features themselves, perhaps in other similar texts or a subsequent chapter of the book.
- Teacher modelling of some aspects of the text type. Seeing the teacher write is important in helping the children understand the decisions we make as writers.
- Letting the children have a go at the text type, perhaps using a Pobble or animation as a stimulus.

Phase 2 Grammar and punctuation

Purpose:

- Identify and understand the grammar and punctuation focus using the example texts
- Apply the grammar and punctuation focus in short writing tasks

Pedagogy:

- Learning objectives concentrate on understanding and applying the punctuation and grammar focus.
- Direct teaching of the grammar and punctuation focus, using the text as a basis for exemplification. Teacher modelling of the punctuation and grammar is important here.
- Activities designed to get the children to identify and explain the grammar and punctuation focus.
- Opportunities for the children to apply the taught grammar and punctuation in their own writing through short writing tasks eg using a Pobble.
- Feedback to the class, groups and individuals to show good examples from the children's work and improvement time to work on misconceptions and inaccuracies.

Phase 3 Extended writing

Purpose:

- Extended writing time so children are able to write a complete piece and apply the text features and punctuation and grammar focus they have been taught, as well as develop their overall skill as a writer
- Opportunity for children to reflect on their own writing techniques, receive feedback and make improvements.

Pedagogy:

- The children will need opportunities to plan their writing. You could use planning sheets and scaffolds to assist them, but talk is the best way to achieve this. Whole class and partner talk help with the planning stage, as does drama and role play. Planning should not be laboured- at some point, they just need to write!
- A sequence of lessons, appropriate to age to give the children time to write. Writing is best done in spells of silence (appropriate to age) punctuated by time to proof read and share with a partner and the class. The children need time to make improvements to their work as they go along. Using their marking pen is integral to this. Older children can also strips of paper to overlay sections that they have rewritten. The writing process needs to feel dynamic.
- Beginnings of lessons are a good opportunity to share good examples and model making improvements. Here the visualiser is an excellent tool.

Phase 4 Evaluation

Purpose:

- Further opportunity for children to reflect on their own writing techniques, receive feedback and make improvements.
- Assessment to inform teacher of class and individual next steps in writing.

Pedagogy:

- Share and celebrate good work and evaluate success of outcomes.
- Children reflect on deeper marking of writing- respond to marking (age appropriate), update writing assessment grids.
